Flooding results in $10-$12 million crop loss

Lott seeking federal funds to rebuild oyster reefs

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi is seeking $1 million in federal funds to rebuild devastated oyster reefs offshore from Hancock County and Pass Christian, a spokesman in Lott's Washington, D.C. office reported Tuesday.

Tom McIlwain, Lott's staff marine biologist, said the United States congressman is attempting to obtain disaster relief funds to assist the state in revitalizing the reefs which are near destruction as the result of recent Pearl and Mississippi River flooding.

The marine biologist reported damage to oyster resources here is estimated at $10-$12 million.

The Mississippi River flooding resulted after the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers New Orleans office more than three weeks ago opened all 350 gates of the Bonnet Carré Spillway upstream from the Crescent City to prevent flooding there, McIlwain noted.

The Corps is now closing the spillway because the river has begun to subside.

But the spillway diversion moves freshwater through Lakes Pontchartrain and Borgne into the Mississippi Sound.

McIlwain reported some 3,900 acres of oyster reefs are affected by the freshwater influx which is reducing salinity and killing the oysters.

He said Pass Marianne, Telegraph, South Handkerchief Reefs and both Pass Christian dredging and tonging reefs are affected.

The marine biologist said the State Bureau of Marine Resources in Long Beach estimates some 100,000 cubic yards of clamshell costing about $1 million is needed to restore the reefs to 1982-83 productivity levels.

McIlwain said Lott stated, "Now is the time to begin the long laborious task of restoring the reefs because it will be at least two years before the reefs can be returned to the high productivity experienced during the past season."

Dr. Fred Deegan, BMR saltwater fisheries chief, Wednesday afternoon explained the oysters would recover after two years, but would not be as plentiful if clamshell is not added. "It's like weeding a garden. You give the crop a better opportunity to get started," he explained.

He further explained the dead oyster reef shell is covered by ocean floor material which prevents establishment of spat sets (a young pinhead size oyster).

Deegan said the BMR placed 80,000 cubic feet of shell on the reefs after a 1979 spillway opening.

He reported that effort resulted in the best oyster crop in 15 years this past season with yields of about 365,000 sacks.

If the clamshell funds are approved, Deegan said this Fall would be the ideal time to place the material on the reefs.

He estimated Mississippi Sound salinity levels should return to normal in about one month.

Deegan noted the oysters were 'stressed' by March floods and because of the 'additional slug of fresh water' stated, "I don't expect a high survival rate."

Minister pleads for switch to county unit road system

By JUNE M. HEYDT

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors was told Monday morning they were not bad men, but they are working under a bad system.

The Rev. Dwyn Milton Mounger, founder of the Diamondhead Presbyterian Church, said: "Many groups, many individuals, and I, feel the present beat system of road maintenance is a bad system."

Mounger continued by quoting a former president, saying, "I want to make this perfectly clear," and added, "I have come here to criticize you. You are honorable men, but I found out that there haven't always been honorable men here."

Mounger noted to the supervisors, "I have worked in the largest bank in Hattiesburg, worked in banks in Jackson and New York City, so I'm not altogether ignorant even though I'm a person."

"I don't disagree with you on anything except the system."

"There have been 20 or 25 careful studies ordered by bureau of statistics and paid for by money. One of these studies says, 'The beat system of Mississippi is appalling, it is given to waste and extravagance, it's given to fraud and it's an open invitation to fraud.'"

"For example," Mounger went on, "In Oklahoma in just the last two or three years they caught 275 to 300 people with their hands in the cookie jar. One hundred and twenty five of those people have been convicted. It's a bad track record."

"Mississippi and Oklahoma are among the few states that still have this system."

Mounger kept emphasizing that supervisors are honorable men, but would add such statements as, "All men do not refuse the temptation."

"I'm not asking for one cent for the public good. I am coming to ask for the good of all citizens that the beat system be changed to a unit system."

Gentlemen I didn't know that in Hancock County we have more road systems than we do in the state of Mississippi. In an area where they have 220 million people they have only one road system. It's so absurd we would laugh about it if it weren't so tragic."

"The state of Mississippi is the poorest in the country and yet our roads cost us more in Mississippi than the richest states of California and New York."

"The beat system reminds me of a goose with a long neck and it stretches all over the county," Mounger said.

"I am a business man, and I have never found a business that's run like this with five purchasing agents, five buying powers."

"You have too much money for anybody to spend. Each of you get $350,000 more or less per year to spend on roads each year. It's an inefficient operation," continued Mounger.

James Travirca, Beat Five, supervisor, responded to Mounger's statement by saying, "My money has been spent filling up the low-lying areas."

Bert Courrige, Beat One supervisor, said, "When I took over I didn't have any operating equipment. I feel a responsibility to keep the equipment operating. It's hard to keep it operating. What I am in effect saying is I keep my operators responsible for keeping the equipment in good running condition."

Mounger introduced Scott Warfield, a resident of Coahoma County, to the supervisors, saying he lives in a county with the unit system and asked Warfield to state what it is like.

Warfield said that he is a farmer who lives in a county under the unit system. He said that for 60 years his county had gravel roads and that after the county went to the unit system at least half of all the roads are black top.

Bay school system requiring decree from legal guardians

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Guardians of Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District students residing in the district will now be required to present a court decree to prove the foster child's residency.

The District Board of Trustees Monday accepted a recommendation by J.D. McCullough, superintendent of education, to require a court decree from guardians of students.

Lucien Gex, school board attorney, Tuesday said the Hancock County Chancery Court must issue the decrees to establish guardianship.

At the Monday night meeting, McCullough reported the previous district policy of only requiring a notarized statement of guardianship has been abused in at least one or two instances annually.

He said in one instance, a letter he district sent to parents of a child was never received.

The superintendent noted any child residing outside the district and attending classes in the Bay school system must pay a $300 annual tuition fee.

In another matter, Mr. Asher appeared before the board inquiring about a $13,993 district expenditure to repair its school buses.

Just after Asher met with the board, he refused to reveal his first name to The Sea Coast Echo.

But at the meeting he charged that McCullough and Donald Caldwell, assistant superintendent and transportation supervisor, 'don't care' about the expenditure.

"McCullough says the taxpayers don't get hurt, but every man in the city and state pays taxes," Asher stated.

The superintendent offered no comment in response to Asher's statements.

In other business at the 7 p.m. regular meeting at the superintendent's Bay Senior High School office, the board:

—Approved a recommendation by Fred Wagner, district architect, to accept an $18,500 bid from J and S Electric Service of Picayune for renovation of two Bay Junior High School restrooms and replacement of second floor doors leading to the school gymnasium;

—Accepted an $846 bid from Dave McDonald Carpets, Inc., for replacing carpeting in the weight room at the high school;

—Accepted resignations of Dr. Brenda Saifid, district special education supervisor; Marcia Engleman,

Senator's
NSTL tour set Friday

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Senator Thad Cochran of Mississippi will tour the National Space Technology Laboratories Friday to help him determine the federal financial needs of the Hancock County installation, a spokesman in the senator's Washington, D.C. office reported Tuesday.

John Perkins, Cochran's press secretary, said the senator is now a member of the United States Senate Defense Subcommittee for Appropriations.

Cochran's NSTL briefing and a quick tour is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Perkins reported.

The press secretary said Cochran is visiting Mississippi facilities funded by the U.S. Department of Defense primarily to view the installations and assess their financial needs to make appropriation recommendations.

Cochran will visit NSTL after a morning speaking engagement before members of the Rice Millers Association meeting in New Orleans, Perkins reported.

He noted Cochran is addressing the group because he is also a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Silent alarm leads police to burglar

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Around 1 a.m. Monday night a man broke into the Wilcox Pharmacy, 2006 Waveland Avenue, according to Chief Donald Dorn of the Waveland Police Department.

Stanley N. Delle, 23, of Lakeshore, was arrested and charged with burglary in connection with that incident, the chief said.

Delle is being held in the Hancock County Jail under no bond because he is a parole violator, said Dorn.

Officers Alan James and Oscar Thomas answered a silent alarm from the pharmacy. When they arrived they saw a small pen light flashing on and off, Dorn added.

The alleged burglar broke one of the front windows and entered the pharmacy. He was looking for drugs, said Dorn and when he heard the police tried to get out the back way but was trapped.

Hancock County Sheriff's department assisted with backup.

Jim Wilcox, owner of the pharmacy, said "We had a busted front window and when he found that he couldn't see he tore open some pen lights."

Wilcox said, "He was looking for drugs when police showed up and tried to get out through the false ceiling but couldn't."

The 7th Annual Fip Johnson Charity Blue Grass and Country Fiddling Contest is scheduled for Sat., June 18. The big event will start at 8 p.m. in the St. Augustine Auditorium on Seminary Drive in Bay St. Louis.

Johnson, who sponsors the benefit, reports there will be some old-fashioned music and some real gospel singing.

Tickets are $2.50 each and can be purchased at the door.

Local fiddlers as well as others from neighboring states are scheduled for the contest.

Johnson said the $100 first prize helps to get the best players in the field.

We hope to see you Saturday night at the big benefit.

The Annual Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo is fast approaching.

The event held over the long weekend of July 4th has a large number of fishermen from Hancock County who participate.

All it takes is for a person to register to fish in the big rodeo, as it is one of the few which does not require an entry fee.

Entry blanks are available from Russell Elliott at Colonial Realty in Bay St. Louis.

Elliott, who is the executive secretary of the rodeo is also co-chairman of the pageant and has been really busy transporting the princesses about the state.

The two local princesses are Miss Marguerite Beaugez representing Bay St. Louis and Miss Kimberly Lane Breland representing the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

The local girls joined other princesses on a visit to the State Capitol yesterday and will be visiting Hancock County next week.

We hope many people will register for the big rodeo, and who knows, they may win one of the big prizes.

ALLIED UNITY ON DISPLAY
By CONGRESSMAN
TRENT LOTT

5th District, Mississippi
Leaders of seven industrialized nations had the chance to sit down together not long ago in the Virginia countryside, talking both formally and privately about problems they must face jointly.

I have had people ask me whether the conference at Williamsburg, a community about 75 miles south of Washington, served a useful purpose or whether it was just another of those periodic meetings which produce few results.

It is important that the leaders of the industrialized world communicate with each other so that unity can be exhibited in the face of any threat, particularly that posed by the Soviet Union.

There were three areas of concentration in the Williamsburg conference in which I feel that real progress was made, and I would like to explore each of them a little more fully.

One was the world economy. The leaders discussed the need to coordinate efforts to beat inflation, high interest rates and other problems. We in the United States must realize that what happens to our economy has a direct impact on the economies of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Canada and Japan.

At the same time, the things they do in their own countries will affect Americans.

A second issue coming out of the conference involved a further statement by our allies that there should be deployment of the Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe to offset the Russian SS 20 and other missiles.

The Europeans are on the front lines of this issue and if they stick to their guns they can succeed in forcing the Soviet Union to join the United States in proposing meaningful reductions in nuclear arms. I thought this statement was a very positive one, since there are elements in Europe which oppose deployment.

The third issue was very significant, too, and involved world trade.

Many Americans feel that some of our allies have been taking advantage of our free trade attitude in the U.S. We have been reluctant to get into the matter of protectionism because it can hit hard at many elements of American life, such as farming.

We need to try to take down the barriers in other countries which block our products. At the same time, we should not be putting up barriers of our own.

So, yes, I would say to the questions over the conference's success, it is a good idea to sit down with your allies. Personal conversations are an excellent way to make sure your message is received loud and clear.

News from Senator Thad Cochran

EMERGENCY REPAIR FUNDING

Senator Thad Cochran has secured Senate approval of $10 million in emergency repairs to watersheds, roads and bridges damaged by recent floods.

The Senate gave unanimous approval to Senator Cochran's amendment as it continued floor consideration of a supplemental appropriations bill.

Cochran told colleagues that recent floods in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, and mudslides and flooding in California, Utah and Nevada have created serious problems and that Soil Conservation Service funds for emergency work was being rapidly depleted.

He noted that between $2 million and $3 million in requests for emergency work on watersheds, roads and bridges is pending with SCS in Mississippi, and a similar amount is being asked for California projects.

Cochran, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture and rural development, warned that Weather Service forecasters indicate "the worst is yet to come" in some parts of the nation.

Earlier, Cochran succeeded in getting the Appropriations panel to include $2.3 million to expedite flood control efforts in the Pearl River basin of Central Mississippi.

With a number of other amendments still pending, Senate leaders expect to reach final passage on the supplemental appropriations bill early next week.

NEW DISTRICT LINES—This map shows the new district lines for Hancock County. Some 5,000 to 6,000 qualified electors will be casting ballots in a new district on August 2. The Hancock County Board of Supervisors have scheduled a legal description of the new boundaries to be published in next Thursday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo. The redistricting was recently approved by the Justice Department and the Hancock County Election Commissioners are working towards trying to make the transition as smooth as possible for all electors. Justice Court judges have been reduced to two, east and west. The dividing line will be the Bay-Waveland City limits to Longfellow Road to Highway 43 (603) N. to Highway 53 to the Pearl River line. Everything east of the line will be the East Justice Court District, and the other side the West Justice Court District.

Swimming most popular summer activity

(Presented as a public service by the Mississippi State Medical Association and The Sea Coast Echo.)

Swimming, one of the most popular of summer sports, can be a healthful, stimulating part of the summer vacation. On the other hand, swimming can be one of the most dangerous of outdoor pastimes.

The Mississippi State Medical Association reminds that healthful swimming begins with clean, sanitary water. Water is an easy and quick means of transmission for many disease organisms, and inevitably swimmers will swallow some water. Swim only in approved areas where the water is clean and free from pollution.

Swimming can be dangerous. Deaths from drowning can occur at any age.

Inability to swim, inexperience, carelessness, poor judgment or lack of supervision are causes of most water accidents. Infants and toddlers need constant supervision by adults who themselves practice good water safety rules.

Swimmers must know their limitations. The depth of the water should be checked and hidden rocks and stumps located before diving. Swimmers should always have someone else along, and preferably swim where a lifeguard is near. Remember that salt water and surf can be more tiring than swimming in a quiet pool or lake.

The swimmer in trouble often can survive if he or she stays calm. Assume a face-up floating position, keeping hands under the water, and move hands and feet slowly. It is possible to stay afloat for hours with relatively little effort.

But thrashing the water in panic will exhaust the endangered swimmer quickly.

Each member of the family should be coached in the fundamentals of swimming safety, and especially mouth-to-mouth resuscitation procedures.

GOVERNOR HONORED

Gov. William F. Winter recently was honored for his efforts to help communicatively handicapped and other youth by the National Council on Communicative Disorders (NCCD) at its second annual dinner in Washington, D.C.

Winter was selected because of his "initiating and spearheading legislation to upgrade the quality of education in his state," according to the NCCD.

"He was the prime mover of a bill which provides for such improvements as extending the requirement for attending school to the age of 14, mandatory state-supported kindergartens, stricter accreditation rules for public school teachers. These changes also will have a positive impact on the handicapped children in the state of Mississippi," the council citation stated.

Jan Larsen, director of the Governor's Office of Handicapped Services, accepted the award for the governor.

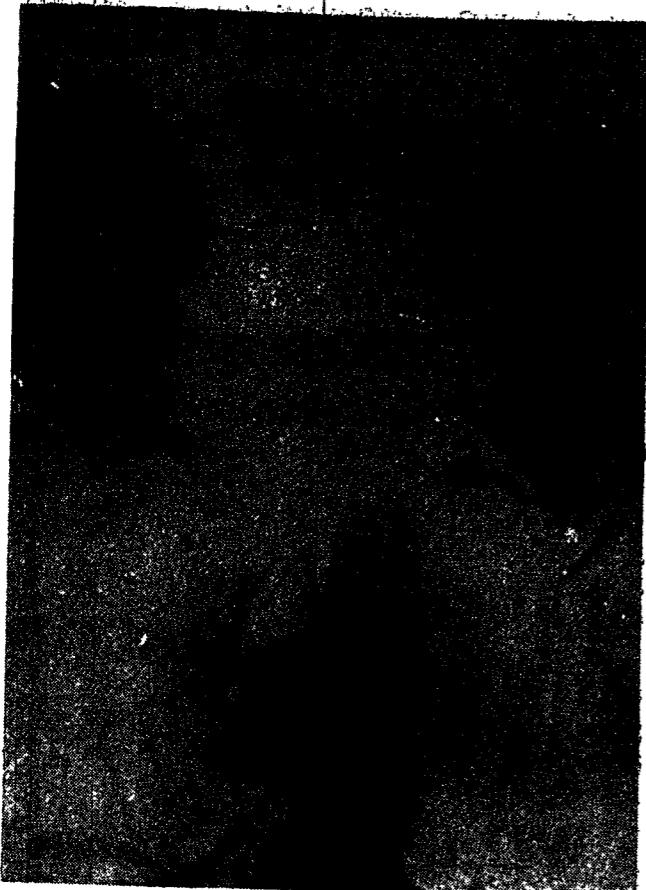

NCCD is a council of 19 national organizations representing the communicatively handicapped.

Star Students are selected on the basis of academic excellence. American College Test scores and scholastic averages are considered in designation of the school's Star Student.

The Student-Teacher Achievement Recognition (Star) Program encourages and promotes academic achievement among Mississippi's high school seniors.

Top scholars are being designated as Star Students in more than 325 participating schools in Mississippi. Funds for these scholarships are provided by the Phil Hardin Foundation of Meridian.

Each Star Student is asked to designate a Star teacher, a teacher who has made the greatest contribution to the student's scholastic achievement.

Mrs. Madelyn O. Taylor was designated as Star teacher. Mrs. Taylor is an English teacher and lives in Pass Christian.

Both the Star Student and Star teacher will receive certificates from the council, in addition to being eligible for competition for scholarship awards.

Vehicle child restraints mandatory July 1

The use of private vehicle child restraints for children under two years of age becomes mandatory in Mississippi on July 1.

Designed to reduce deaths and injuries of children in automobile accidents, this "Required Use of Child Restraint Devices" act requires every person transporting a child under age two in a private motor vehicle to provide protection of the child by properly using a child passenger restraint device meeting federal motor vehicle standards.

Any person charged with violating the act will be fined not more than $10 for each offense. No person charged with violating the act will be convicted if, prior to the court or hearing appearance, the person produces proof of acquiring the required child restraint device.

The State Tax Commission will provide notice of the requirement for child restraint devices or systems with delivery of a motor vehicle license tag.

"Automobile accidents are the number one killer of children after the critical early weeks of life for the newborn baby," says Roy Thigpen, the governor's representative for highway safety and director of the Governor's Office of Criminal Justice Planning.

"Most of these deaths, as well as many injuries, could be avoided if parents would take the time to buckle their children into a proper child restraint device," Thigpen says.

"Small children, if they are not restrained, literally become flying missiles," he says. "It happens so fast with such force, even in low-speed crashes, that neither the parent nor the child can prevent the child from a violent impact."

Thigpen said that all automobile child restraints manufactured after May 1980 must pass tests which show that they can provide protection for children in actual crashes. "Buyers," he adds, "should look for the label on the restraint which says 'dynamically tested.'

"Child restraints are important because children need to have the crash forces spread evenly over their fragile bodies," Thigpen notes.

The restraints are fastened to the automobile safety belt already in the car.

"Some parents believe they can protect infants and young children from being injured by holding them in their laps," says Carolyn Evans, coordinator of the Safety Education Project of the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg and the Governor's Highway Safety Program. "but this is not true. In a 30 mile-an-hour crash, for example, a child may be thrown forward with a force equal to 30 times its own weight."

"If you are wearing a safety belt, the child can be torn from your arms and hurled into the dash or windshield," Evans says. "If you are not wearing a safety belt, both you and your child will fly forward, with the probability that your child may be crushed between you and the dash. Holding your child in your lap is not safe."

The type of child restraint to be used depends upon the age of the child.

Infant carriers or convertible child safety seats are the only types of child restraints recommended for use by babies. In this restraint system, the baby faces backwards in a semi-reclining position.

An accident, the baby's sturdy back absorbs the crash forces rather than its delicate chest or abdomen.

The carrier is lined with soft padding, has an internal safety harness to hold the baby in the restraint and is anchored to the automobile by the vehicle's safety belt.

"The time to begin using the infant carrier is on the baby's first ride home from the hospital," says Evans. "Parents should anticipate the need for an infant carrier before the baby is born and buy or rent one early. For newborn babies, rolled-up receiving blanket placed around the head and shoulders will give their heads additional support."

Three types of restraint systems are recommended for toddlers from one to four years old. They include the child safety seat, the protective shield and the safety harness.

Children over the age of four or five and weighing about 40 pounds can be restrained by the use of the vehicle lap belt, with the child sitting upright against the back of the seat.

Most child restraints range in price from $25 to $85, but parents can save money by renting or borrowing.

"Although the new law refers only to children under two years of age," Evans said. "Hospitals and community service organizations also have loaner programs.

"Persons wishing to purchase the child restraints," she says, "will find that they are available in most stores that stock items for children."

Thigpen notes, "While the new law stresses the use of child restraints, we hope compliance will be prompted by love for children rather than fear of arrest."

Additional information on the child restraints and the new law may be obtained by writing to Evans at the Governor's Highway Safety Program, 510 George St., Suite 246, Jackson 39201, or dialing 354-6892.

Information also may be obtained from the Governor's Service Line by dialing the toll-free number, 1-800-222-7622, or the Jackson number, 961-4042.

Hal Becker retiring from Coast Electric

H.L. (Hal) Becker Jr., assistant manager of Coast Electric Power Association, will be retiring from his post at the end of this month after 25 years of service.

Becker served Coast Electric first as office manager in March, 1958. He has in addition assumed the duties of purchasing agent, personnel manager, data processing advisor, and served in various other capacities.

Arising out of the complexity of his duties, he has been dubbed, "A Man of Many Hats" by his co-workers, and recently was presented a plaque in recognition of his services to the association.

"He has served with dedication and tenacity in spite of a serious heart ailment resulting in open heart surgery late last year. Through his diversified knowledge and abilities, he has proven a valuable asset to the association and will be sorely missed," said Henry Thomas, association manager.

Becker is a graduate of Emory University in Atlanta, Ga. with a bachelor's degree in business administration, and lifetime membership in Zeta Chi Chapter of Sigma Chi.

Prior to being employed by Coast Electric he had been employed by Sears as a credit manager for a number of years in their retail stores.

He is a veteran of World War II, having served in the United States Navy as lieutenant (junior grade) with duty overseas.

Becker, his wife Jane and daughter Nancy reside in Long Beach where he plans to spend his retirement years.

Another daughter, Susan Antoine, resides in Clinton with her husband Ricky and young son.

His only son, Hal III, married and residing with his wife and young daughter in San Diego, Calif., is presently serving overseas in the United States Navy.

Have you joined the legions of flounderers along our coastline these summer evenings, light or lantern in hand, searching for the wily denizens of the shallows along the beach?

As I drove along the beach road at the Pass the other evening, I saw light after light bobbing above the waters... some optimistic or confident souls already had their fires going on the sand, all prepared to enjoy that treat of treats, flounder cooked quickly over the fire just after being lured from the Gulf waters.

It was the Indians who taught the early settlers along our coast the art of flounding, or flounder-fishing, using arrows or spears, and it's a sport we enjoy these days as well.

The flounder may not be a thing of beauty, but its sweet white meat makes for good eating. It's easy to cook, easy to stuff, easy to enjoy... just remember the cardinal rule of fish cookery: don't overcook it, and thus ruin both texture and flavor.

One of the ways I like flounder best is simply broiled very briefly, just until it flakes to the touch of the fork, then doused with melted butter and chopped fresh parsley, along with lemon juice or slices of lemon. This is easy to do on the grill, or in a hinged basket on the grill, or over a fire on the beach, or inside the house in the broiler.

For a real Gulf Coast treat, for four, try:

STUFFED FLOUNDER
4 medium-size flounders
1 stick butter, as needed
Pepper salt, cayenne to your taste
1 cup crabmeat
1 cup shrimp, chopped
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped green onions, tops included
1 clove garlic, minced
2 Tbsp. chopped fresh parsley
1 egg, slightly beaten

Approximately 1 ½ cups bread crumbs or bread cubes. Sauté the onion, celery, garlic in half of the butter over a low fire. Add the bread, crabmeat, shrimp, parsley and egg, mixing well. Season as you like it. Set aside.

Split the thick or dark side of the flounder lengthwise down the middle, loosening the meat from the bone so as to form a pocket for the stuffing. Brush the inside of the pocket and the fish itself with a little melted butter and lemon juice, then stuff the pocket.

If you're broiling the flounder, place the stuffed fish in a pan with just enough water to cover the bottom. Broil about three or four inches from the heat, until it flakes easily, basting often with the liquid in the pan.

If you're baking the flounder, melt the remaining butter in a shallow baking pan, arrange the fish in it, not overlapping, cover and bake at 350° for 25 minutes, or until it flakes, uncovering the pan for the last five minutes or so.

And if the budget doesn't run to crab or shrimp at this point... just devise, improvise, make do! Some cooks grind a small amount of shrimp, mix it into the bread, etc., and the shrimp flavor is there!

A chopped cucumber stuffing is delicious, also. And the other day, I had just a bit of boiled crawfish left over, not really enough to do much with... so I chopped the peeled tails, and made my stuffing that way!

They became so popular that it expanded over the years and now she does doll clothing, basinets, pillows, and wall hangings. Some of her work is on consignment in Dorothy Brown's shop on Second Avenue.

Keesler medical center orthopedic care hampered

The medical center at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi recently experienced an unexpected loss of an orthopedic surgeon and will lose another and both podiatrists in the near future.

Because of this, the medical center will experience longer than usual delays for non-emergency orthopedic care.

This is effective immediately and will continue through August, a Keesler spokesman reports.

During this period, orthopedic and podiatry services will be limited with priority given to active duty members, emergency cases, inpatients and all patients with an orthopedic consult presently under active orthopedic or podiatry treatment, the spokesman says.

The delay will primarily affect family and retired members who experience a new non-emergency problem in the future, the spokesman explains.

The medical center asks all patrons to be patient during this time, the spokesman adds.

Supervisors plan committee to study beach maintenance

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Realizing that something has to be done quickly to keep the beaches in Hancock County from completely washing away, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors called a special meeting Monday afternoon.

An unofficial committee was formed, consisting of Larry Bennett, mayor of Bay St. Louis; John Longo, mayor of Waveland; James Head, Gulf Regional Planning Commission; Cecil Dubuisson, from Trent Lott's office; Bob Landry, South Mississippi Planning and Development Commission; Mike Smith, Advanced Developments Inc.; and Supervisors James Travirca, Sam Pernicaro and Bert Courrige.

The committee will check into ways of getting funding quickly in order to pump in a new sand berm on the beach and to formulate an on-going maintenance program.

Walter Gex, attorney for the supervisors and moderator at the meeting said, "We have to formulate some sort of plan to establish an on-going maintenance program. Without a maintenance program we won't be able to get funding from any agency."

James Head, Gulf Regional Planning Commission, said there is money in the federal job bill program but, he said, the money is meant to go for jobs already established.

The biggest problem the new committee will be facing is time. It takes time to apply for and receive federal grants, said several people at the meeting.

Smith noted that the drainage problems in the city have a lot to do with the problems on the beaches.

"The primary thing is to improve the channels," Smith said. "If we try to let the water follow the natural channels only two or three places would be needed where new channels would have to be used."

Three years ago the beach was wider. When the beach gets narrower the water goes straight across and takes the sand with it. The runoff across the beach tends to erode the beach even faster. The sand is continually going west, Smith explained.

"Digging deeper ditches isn't going to solve the problem," said Smith adding, "You have to have somewhere for the water to go."

Gex asked what the possibility of getting emergency money is and was told that an emergency is usually considered some force of nature and is immediate and short term.

Gex answered, "We've had 10 years of emergency. We've been fighting an army of ants and now they're ready to eat us alive. That's an emergency in my terms."

Head suggested that the board come up with a local job application to be sent to EDA preferably before July 1. He said, "If enough people are put to work the possibility of help is good."

Members of the committee agreed that they would work together and do whatever they have to do to get funding for the beaches.

ETV Brief

MYSTERY SERIES

"The Racing Game" is back on Mississippi ETV with rebroadcasts of popular programs from the series on "Mystery" at 9 p.m., Tuesdays, beginning June 21.

As a jockey in "The Racing Game," Sid Halley proved to be a winner—until his racing career was ended in a crippling fall. In order to overcome the injury that left his left hand mangled and useless, Sid was fitted with a potentially bone-crushing mechanical hand. And with the aid and encouragement of karate expert Chico Barnes, he was back on the track with a new career—as a private investigator.

Sid's knowledge of the racing world and his inherent will to win proved to be strong assets in his fight.

SEVEN SAMURAI

(*) For three and a half hours the audience sat perfectly still, mesmerized, reading subtitles and watching a black and white epic dealing with 16th century feudal Japan where the main characters were common villagers, samurai and marauding brigands. The film was Akira Kurosawa's 1954 masterpiece "Seven Samurai."

Pauline Kael called "Seven Samurai" a "sensuous film" and upon seeing this vintage coup de maître — uncut and uncensored at the Prytania Theatre in New Orleans — I would heartily agree.

The black and white photography by Asaichi Nakai is soft and well-focused and there are no disturbingly grainy images. And the characterizations, even with the subtitles, are carefully drawn and complete.

"Seven Samurai" wastes no time in developing momentum. In the opening sequence, brigands, or raiders, plan on returning to a small village to steal the barley once it is harvested. Little do they know that the conflict has begun because one of the local townfolk overhears their treacherous plans.

The villagers take their predicament to the resident wise man who bades them to hire samurai to defend their homeland.

What follows is a wonderful story, laced liberally with humor, as the villagers go about hiring the samurai, the conflicts created and fighting the inevitable battle. And what makes it so interesting is the story — good vs. evil — the photography, direction and Kurosawa's careful understanding of his heritage and culture.

Before going to see "Seven Samurai," about the only impression I had of these Japanese warriors was the late John Belushi's antic parodies — Samurai Dry Cleaner, Samurai Florist, etc. Indeed these warriors swaggered and strutted around towns, clothed in fine silks and brandishing a sword nearly four feet long, but then, they had a right to act this way. The Japanese have a very proud culture, and these samurai were the proudest of the proud — ready to die for a cause that they believed in.

Having seen "Return of the Jedi" just recently, "Seven Samurai" presented several interesting parallels. First and foremost was the good vs. evil concept.

This was followed by the reward possessed by the antagonistic opponent — in "Jedi" it was the dreaded Death Star and in "Samurai" was three guns. At one point in "Seven Samurai" the samurai leader says that it's easier to "attack than to defend."

That is the major difference between Lucas' space age flick and Kurosawa's earthy, humanistic epic. While Lucas' camera follows the Colony's attack on three major fronts — on the planet, in the Death Star and outside; Kurosawa keeps his camera firmly entrenched behind walls, moats and sharpened bamboo spears. Only when the sanguinary brigands attack do we see them.

"Seven Samurai" possesses moments of fierce combat, intense devotion, beautiful soliloquies — in particular, Toshiro Mifune's discourse on the difference between samurai and villagers — and great humor.

It is doubtful that "Seven Samurai," which was the basis for John Sturges' "The Magnificent Seven," will ever be seen on American television in its uncut, uncensored form... but if it is, be sure to watch. Not only does it present a foreign culture in such a way that the actors and their words become universal, but it is also a fabulous celebration of moviemaking at its very best!

Bay man training as air controller

Berlon E. Dennis Jr. of Bay St. Louis recently completed a 12-week course of study in air traffic control procedures and problems at the Federal Aviation Administration Academy, Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City.

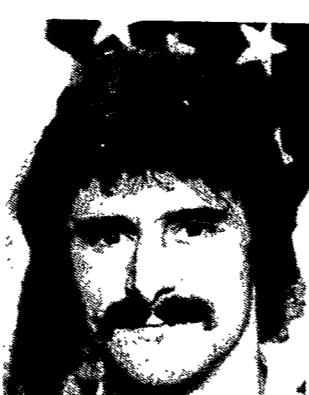

An FAA spokesman says prior to this training, Dennis passed a stringent entrance examination under civil service requirements to establish eligibility to become an air traffic controller.

At the academy, courses centered on air traffic procedures and handling large and small aircraft in vertical and lateral separations within the nation's airspace system, the spokesman explains.

The Academy is the principle source of technical training for the FAA. It trains those specialists who man the air traffic control centers around the nation, the airport control towers, and the flight service stations used by the many corporate and private aircraft, the spokesman reports.

The spokesman says training is also given in electronics for engineers and technicians who install and maintain specialized electronics equipment used by the FAA.

BERLON E. DENNIS

In addition, initial and recurrent training is provided for the FAA air carrier and general aviation operations inspectors who check the operators and aviation personnel providing service to the public, the spokesman reports.

Dennis will report to the Houston Air Route Traffic Control Center at Houston, Tex., to continue working toward journeyman classification, the spokesman adds.

TWYLA PROFILE

Avant-garde modern dancer and choreographer Twyla Tharp is profiled in "Twyla Tharp Scrapbook: 1965-1982" at 10 p.m., Wednesday, June 22, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

Early works like "Stride," well-known dances set to popular music, such as "Sue's Leg," and commissioned works for dancers, skaters and even a football player are presented in this profile.

Twyla Tharp is well-known for her popular music accompaniment as illustrated in "Eight Jelly Rolls" (1971), music by Jelly Roll Morton; "The Bix Pieces" (1971), music by Bix Biederbecke; and "Sue's Leg" (1975), music by Fats Waller. "Sue's Leg," dedicated to PBS senior vice-president of programming Sue Weil, was the first dance performed for the "Great Performances: Dance in America" series.

"There isn't a supervisor that's against the unit system, what we don't want is a compulsive unit, someone telling us we have to go on the unit system."

"Mounger said that there is just one state highway system, that's not true, there are three separate systems, the southern, the central and the northern," Kellar added.

On March 14, 1983, the board of supervisors voted unanimously to go on the unit system.

If one supervisor had voted for the unit system, they wouldn't be eligible for state funds.

board and supervisor from Beat Two, said, "One thing I'd like to say, man of the lord, we're not partial to you because you're clergy. One thing I would request is that you take our new construction gear and compare it with that of any other county. We have less than two roads that aren't black top. I'd like you to compare that with any other county."

Following the meeting, Kellar said, "Mounger is comparing our county with Coahoma County that is on the unit system. However, they are comparing maintenance with construction. They don't give us any credit for new construction."

Kellar went on to add, "Each county is different if we went on the unit system with one central location, we'd spend half of our time on the roads. I just don't think it would work in our county."

"I think Rev. Mounger's intentions are good but he doesn't see the whole picture."

"He (Mounger) is being influenced by the Mississippi Economic Council and using their figures."

Supervisors back consolidating flood agencies

By JUNE M. HEYDT

A resolution was adopted by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors Monday morning urging that the proper authorities, including the governor, take actions necessary to establish a consolidated management agency for the Pearl River Basin Development District (PRBDD) to implement permanent flood control measures along the Pearl River.

Presented by Norton Haas and L.J. Breaux, representatives of PRBDD's board of directors, the resolution states that it is necessary that all jurisdictional and management questions of flood control management be resolved in order that the flood control measures can be implemented at the earliest possible date.

Three changes and additions were included in the resolution:

—One) The endorsement of the Shooco Dry Dam is not included in the endorsement. Breaux explained, "We can't endorse the dam because it would cause too many other counties to be flooded."

—Two) The support levee of one-half mile presently paid to the district be maintained. Haas stated that they don't want the levy to be raised.

—Three) The board of directors of the new authority be the same as PRBDD composed of two directors from each member county to be appointed by the board of supervisors.

In other business, the supervisors accepted a bid for $164,935 from Lester Chandler Construction Co. of Ocean Springs for construction of a second hangar at Stennis International Air- port.

The Port and Harbor Commission will initially fund the project through its airport construction fund. However, the fixed base operator, Bay Aviation Inc., will repay the commission with interest over the next 15 years, according to James DeBlanc, commission director.

Construction of the steel structure will begin within 30-days and the hangar is expected to be completed within three months, DeBlanc reported.

A change order was authorized reducing the project's cost by $4,000 for the installation of an underground electrical conduit for the hangar.

DeBlanc said that the board agreed to utilize its employees to install the line underground in plastic conduit which would cost about $1,000.

Coast Electric agreed to lay the wiring if the members of the board would supply the material.

Mike Smith of Advanced Developments, Inc., a Bay St. Louis engineering firm, reported the Chandler bid was the lowest, about $12,000 under the next lowest bidder.

POINT OF LAW

Mississippi State Bar

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q: My husband and I have been having problems, and two weeks ago he moved to another county to live with his brother. Yesterday I got a petition and summons in the mail where he has sued me for divorce in the county in which he now lives. A friend of mine says that he cannot do that. What should I do?

A: If you and your husband have been residents of the State of Mississippi for more than six months and if your husband has established a residence in the other county, that is, he is not living there temporarily and solely on the grounds of irreconcilable differences, then the petition for divorce is properly filed. However, if the petition for divorce is based on any grounds for a divorce other than irreconcilable differences, the petition must be filed in the county where you reside or where you may be found at the time. It is mandatory that the petition be filed in the proper county, otherwise the court cannot enter a valid decree for divorce. You should now assume that the petition has not been validly filed. You should have your attorney examine the petition and advise you further.

Q: Several years ago I bought a house for rental income. Now I would like to sell the house. Two years ago I entered into a one-year written ten lease with a new tenant. Can I sell the house?

A: Yes, you may sell the house, subject to the rights of the tenant to remain in the house until the end of the lease. The tenant will continue to pay rent to the new owner.

Q: Are you looking for a lawyer?

A: If you don't have a lawyer and think you have a legal problem, the answer may be as convenient as your telephone.

The Mississippi State Bar Lawyer Referral Service is here to help you. Simply dial 1-800-682-6423 or in Jackson the number is 948-4488.

The Lawyer Referral Service is designed to help those people who need an attorney, but do not know one in their area. When you call the Lawyer Referral Service, the operator will request your name, address, and a brief description of your problem. Any information you give the operator will be held in the strictest of confidence.

Listening to your problem, the operator will give you the name, address and telephone number of a lawyer in your area who has indicated an interest in working with problems like yours. There are presently 386 attorneys listed geographically throughout Mississippi who are members of the Lawyer Referral Panel.

It is your responsibility to contact the lawyer and make an appointment to discuss your legal problem before bringing all documents and info-mation relating to your legal problem to the initial consultation.

There is no charge for calling the Lawyer Referral Service. Attorneys participating in the service have agreed to provide an initial consultation up to thirty minutes for a fee of $20, which is returned to the service to offset operating costs. If it is determined that you do have a legal problem that requires additional time and work, any fees will be decided between you and the lawyer.

Q: To whom do I report the apparent illegal dumping of waste or other substances into a river?

A: The Department of Natural Resources is primarily responsible for controlling pollution in Mississippi rivers and other water bodies.

Report any such incident to the Department of Natural Resources in Jackson at 961-5000. Ask them to respond to you in writing as to what they find from their investigation.

Q: Attached to my water bill last month was a statement notifying me that the water provided me the previous month did not conform to the standards of the Safe Drinking Water Act. What does this mean?

A: The Safe Drinking Water

Act was passed by Congress to ensure that public water supplies will be free from substances that could harm human health. The law directs the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to set standards (called "maximum contaminant levels") for safe drinking water, to recommend techniques for treating water, to monitor water systems to make sure they comply with the standards and to enforce the standards.

States such as Mississippi, which have adopted standards that are approved by the EPA, have been given the responsibility for monitoring public water systems and for enforcing the standards. In Mississippi this was done by the State Board of Health.

In the situation you described, the company or association that supplies your water did not meet at least one of the standards during the month indicated in the notice. It was then required by the Safe Drinking Water Act to notify you on your next water bill. If you have any questions as to why your water supplier was not in compliance, call your local health department.

Money Talk

By Norine Barnes

I've had several people ask me about gold jewelry and diamonds as possible investments. Over the next four weeks I would like to give you some general information from the Federal Trade Commission that might help you decide whether these investments are right for you.

No one can argue about the beauty of a diamond. But whether a diamond is a good investment requires a look beyond the glitter.

Most consumers don't have enough experience to know a good diamond investment from a bad one. They read claims that diamond prices have soared in recent years.

The claims look pretty good compared to the return on their savings account. Before buying, consider the following cautions.

Caution #1 - Know Your Seller. Most people know that buying diamonds over the phone or through the mail from a company you never heard of is not smart. But the sales pitch for diamonds can be so appealing, many consumers do just that!

If you're contacted by a company selling diamonds, investigate before sending a check. Unfortunately, there are no "registered diamond brokers" approved for their competence and honest business dealings. You should at least call your local Better Business Bureau, the Postal Inspector, or your State Attorney General's office to see what information they might have about the company.

See if you can get a report through your bank which would tell you something about the company's financial standing.

Caution #2 - Know What You're Buying. Are you sure of the diamond quality? Most consumers can't tell the difference between real diamonds and fakes. Even if you're assured a diamond is real, can you still evaluate its quality? Therefore, you might want a second opinion.

Ideally, you should have an independent appraiser look at the diamond before you buy. However, this is often difficult, if not impossible, to do. You may also have to pay a fee for this appraisal service.

Some diamond sellers will have appraisals done for you, but you have no way of knowing whether the appraisal is accurate.

Others will sell you diamonds on approval and allow you a limited time to have them appraised. You could then return them if you're dissatisfied. If you're given this offer, make sure it's in writing.

It all comes down to this. When you buy diamonds, you have to rely on someone else's opinion. Make sure it's someone you can trust.

Next week we will consider additional cautions in buying diamonds.

Venezuelan Navy attache to inspect Pass boat work

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Venezuelan Naval attache is scheduled to visit a Pass Christian shipyard at the end of this month or early in July to inspect a steel landing craft now under construction for that country.

Kevin Lagarde of Pearlington, production engineer of Champion Swiftships, Inc. in Pass Christian, said Tuesday that Rear Adm. Louis A. Durand, the attache, and his wife will visit the shipyard to view the 130-foot craft which is about 50 percent complete.

Greeting Durand will be Jerry Hoffpauir of Morgan City, La., Champion's president, Lagarde reported.

The hull work on the vessel, begun May 3, is about 75 percent complete, Lagarde added.

He explained that when the hull, now positioned upside down, is completed it will be "rolled over" and launched for construction completion.

Lagarde said the Venezuelan boat is a unique design, but is similar to a craft the shipyard recently built for Saudi Arabia.

The vessel under construction is designed to transport heavy equipment and troops, he explained.

Champion is contracted by the Venezuelan Navy to build two identical landing crafts and will also construct two 154-foot steel river patrol boats for the Central American nation, the production engineer said.

He reported the patrol boats are similar in design to the landing crafts, but are modified to support remote riverine bases by transporting supplies.

Lagarde said two Venezuelan Navy officials have been at the Pass shipyard to oversee the landing craft construction.

The officials are Cmdr. Louis Hernandez, Naval mission chief, and CPO Alejandro Bogado, mission inspector, the production engineer listed.

Five more Venezuela Navy officials will join the two at the Pass Christian site on June 27, including two petty officers who are inspectors, one clerk typist and a lieutenant.

Purcell vows Hancock regulation compliance

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Purcell, Inc. executive says the company plans to complete installation of amenities in a Diamondhead subdivision to comply with Hancock County Subdivision Regulations.

The Hancock Planning Commission, charged with enforcing the regulations, recently rescinded a previous decision not to approve any more Diamondhead subdivisions until three existing ones were either legally vacated or improved to meet county requirements.

James Rester of the Leetown Community commission president, Tuesday said the board cancelled its action after Purcell, Inc., primary Diamondhead developers, pledged to install the amenities and requested plats of two undeveloped subdivisions be kept on file at the Hancock Chancery Clerk's office.

Holcomb Hector, a Purcell, Inc. vice president and Diamondhead general manager, Tuesday reported the company plans to complete installation of water and sewerage systems and paved streets by January in Unit One, Phase Three, located between The Oaks and Tennis World.

He said lots have been sold in that subdivision so Purcell is legally bound to complete promised amenities in the area.

But he said no immediate development is planned for Unit Two, Phase Three, located south of I-10, and Fairway Estates, Phase Two, adjacent to the Cardinal Golf Course's first nine holes.

The Hancock Board of Supervisors recently accepted a commission resolution allowing Purcell to leave the two subdivision plats on file.

Hector reported Purcell "never began sales" in the two platted single-family dwelling subdivisions.

He said the Diamondhead-based company has not decided how the subdivisions will be marketed, but noted the company for the last three years has concentrated its efforts in the construction of multi-family dwellings such as condominiums.

He said if Purcell decides to build condominiums in the two undeveloped subdivisions, both plats will have to be legally vacated and re-filed to reflect the changes.

Hector revealed since the beginning of 1983 some 79 building permits have been issued for $8 million in Diamondhead commercial and residential construction.

THE LEGEND OF JOHN LUSE

This is the story of a Yazoo county farm boy whose grandfather commanded the 18th Mississippi Regiment at Gettysburg until his death on the battlefield — and how this young lad subsequently became a unique military legend himself two generations later as "the soldier with nine lives."

Perhaps it was the family heritage immortalized by Confederate Col. William Henry Luse before he died at Gettysburg that influenced this young Mississippi grandson two generations later to upstage his notable grandfather.

Or maybe it was the pluck and alacrity of young John E. Luse in his own right. He had been an athletic standout at Benton high school and Holmes Jr. College before he entered the army on April 5, 1943 at Fort Benning, Georgia, and commenced an unbelievable military sojourn.

Sgt. Luse should have been maimed and dead many times over before a jeep overturned at night on a mountainous road in Germany during war games about the time of the Kennedy assassination in 1963. He died — belatedly — at night following the jeep wreck. And this is his uncanny story.

Shortly after entering service young Luse was assigned to the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne division, where he served during World War II. He made the famed nighttime jump on the eve of the Normandy invasion to help knock out the German coastal defenses. He was unjured.

In September, 1944, Sgt. Luse was in the midst of the Allied airborne assault on Rhine bridges at Arnhem and Niermengen. He was captured by the Germans, but escaped from a POW camp nine days later by befriending a Polish guard who joined him in the escape. Sgt. Luse found his way back to U.S. lines in Holland.

In the bloody "Bridge Too Far" involvement, Sgt. Luse crossed the Rhine River in a rubber boat to direct artillery fire which destroyed about 35 German tanks.

During the Korean War Sgt. Luse went back in service with the Army, and was standing in formation during an inspection by General Maxwell Taylor. The general recognized taking German regiment. Following the war he recalled the incident to his brother-in-law Jack Pepper, engineer with the Mississippi Bureau of Natural Resources, water division. He tearfully described the misguided German attack during which they blindly continued their charge until they were wiped out.

The next major battle involving the legendary soldier was at Bastogne where he lobbed hand grenades into German tanks until he suffered a bayonet wound and frostbitten feet. Physicians at the field hospital decided to amputate his feet, but Sgt. Luse was nowhere around when it became time for the operation, and Luse hiked back to his unit and the exercise apparently restored circulation to his feet and saved them.

After World War II he used those same numb feet to try out for the Little Olympics at Nurnberg, Germany, and ran the 100 yard dash in 9.5 seconds while attired in army fatigues and GI shoes. General Maxwell Taylor gave him the nickname "Jackrabbit."

Back in the States in 1947 fate came dramatically his way again. During a parachute jump both of his parachutes failed to open. He plunged 1,200 feet into a shallow creek, embedding himself in mud. He survived but was put in a full-length cast for six months. But he emerged from the hospital for more duty.

Also at Ft. Benning, Sgt. Luse fell from a catwalk at the top of the 250-foot high parachute jump tower. He fell 30 or 40 feet before grabbing a supporting crossbar which stopped the fall. Again, the Vaughn native survived.

General James V. Edmondson, commander of the 17th U.S. Air Force, said, "I've never known a soldier with so many outstanding qualities as Sgt. Luse." The general escorted the sergeant's widow and two children at his funeral as German paratroopers presented Mrs. Luse with a plaque commemorating their esteem for the late sergeant.

During the Korean War Sgt. Luse went back in service with the Army, and was standing in formation during an inspection by General Maxwell Taylor. The general recognized

Rodeo to feature first annual Arm Wrestling event

By Edgar Perez

The 1983 Mississippi State Stand-up Pro-Am Arm Wrestling Championships will be staged Saturday, July 2 at Rice Pavilion in conjunction with the Gulfport Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo.

"Arm wrestling is an ancient sport, dating back for centuries," said Ben T. Morehead of Gulfport, state director for the World Arm Wrestling Federation.

He said professional arm wrestling is a new sport in Mississippi, with the July event being the first of its kind in the state.

Winners will be entered in American Arm Wrestling Association records in addition to receiving first, second and third place trophies in five men's weight divisions.

Special awards will be presented for "best match of the day."

Association rules require all competitors to be at least 18-years-old. Competition will be with right hand only.

Weight classes include up to 150 pounds; 151 to 165; 166 to 185; 186 to 210; and 211 and above.

Weigh-ins will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon on the day of the event. A three-pound allowance will be made for clothing.

Participants will attend a meeting at the pavilion from 11:30 a.m. to noon and competition is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

Contestants must pay a $5 entry fee as well as purchase a $9 yearly membership in the American Arm Wrestling Association, Morehead explained.

Entry fees may be mailed to Morehead at POB 6340, Gulfport, 39501 through Monday, or paid on the day of the contest.

Spectators will be admitted free to the championship action, he added.

Mississippi shrimp processors eye chemical treatment advantages

Biloxi shrimp processors have taken a greater interest in using sodium tripolyphosphate (STP) since Florida processors announced last year that they would not buy any shrimp that had been treated with the phosphates.

Local processors became curious after the announcement and decided to look into phosphates more deeply. The truth of the matter is that treating shrimp with STP can prevent the loss of weight that results when untreated shrimp are frozen and thawed.

That weight loss, known as "drip loss," contains proteins, vitamins, and minerals, which means a loss as well of nutritional value.

"Our Mississippi processors stand to save a sizable amount of money just by preventing that weight loss," states Al Perry, coordinator of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory, Office of Fishery Assistance in Ocean Springs. He is working with five seafood plants on methods of using STP.

Perry notes that most Biloxi shrimp processors blast freeze their shrimp and wholesale them in 5-pound boxes to other processors like those in Tampa, or to institutions and restaurants.

Over the years, a processor packing 5-pound boxes of shrimp has had to overpack every box by several ounces so that the product would still weigh 5 pounds after it had been frozen and thawed.

The extra weight overpacked depends on the size and age of the shrimp and whether they are peeled, or headed and left in the shell.

"A medium size packing plant in this part of the Gulf can produce 1 million pounds or 200,000 5-pound boxes of shrimp in a good year. If half the production was frozen headless in the shell, each box would have to be overpacked by 4 ounces and 25,000 pounds of shrimp would be sacrificed to drip loss," states Perry.

"If the remaining 100,000 boxes were filled with peeled shrimp, they would be packed with 6 ounces extra, meaning that 37,000 pounds of shrimp tails were used that the processor is not paid for."

"Today that is a heavy burden for a plant working on a relatively small profit margin," Perry adds. Many different handling and packaging experiments have been tried over the years to help reduce this overpacking burden, he said, but little relief has been gained until now.

During the 1982 shrimp season, Perry began experimenting in two processing plants to determine how STP could be used to treat the shrimp being processed. In the 1983 season, he plans to work in three additional plants.

"The shrimp take up the STP at different rates depending on how old they are, so it is very important to know when the shrimp were caught. This summer we will be able to obtain more data, and they will give us a more definitive statistical relationship," states Perry.

Sodium tripolyphosphate is used almost universally in the red meat industry today and it has been in use for 30 to 40 years.

"So, now if a seafood plant owner can use a legitimate, economical, food-grade chemical as a dilute solution to seal in water-soluble proteins in fresh shrimp so they don't drain out when the shrimp are thawed, then the economic advantage of dipping with STP is too obvious to ignore," states Perry.

There are additional benefits to be gained. For instance, STP has properties that prohibit spoilage bacteria and help prevent dehydration (freezer burn), plus it is sometimes used to improve texture, as in ham.

A number of seafood processors on the Gulf coast and elsewhere have already begun using sodium tripolyphosphate to treat king crab and shrimp, particularly items used in frozen products for the retail consumer.

That was the reason the Tampa processors did not want to buy STP-treated shrimp; they wanted to reap the benefit of using the chemical to treat shrimp used in their plants.

As in any industry there may be a few who will abuse the use of a chemical like STP in order to gain a weight advantage not just prevent a weight loss.

"But, overreated shrimp get extremely slippery, appear clear rather than opaque, and they can even taste soapy," Perry notes. "So, if a plant overtreats its shrimp, it won't be long before its products get sent back or customers stop buying them."

He said that laboratory experiments have shown that using STP in low concentrations of 0.5% and 1.0% solutions will achieve the objective of sealing in the natural juices and flavor of the shrimp.

Phosphates do this by forming a gel coat on the shrimp and, used at low concentrations, they do not penetrate the tissues of the shrimp.

It does not take much STP to do the job, but it is a big step from the laboratory to the packing room. There the processing activities have to go on continuously without interruption. So plant owners must find when they can insert a phosphate treatment step in their own operation without disrupting product flow.

Many plants are using a 4% to 6% solution of STP as a dip before packing. If used as the glaze water in a bag of frozen shrimp, it would cause no disruption of plant operations, but the weight loss reduction would not be as great as if the shrimp were dipped briefly before boxing.

Bringing the shrimp into contact with a 6% (or even up to a 12%) solution for just a few seconds by dipping results in the formation of the desired gel layer, and the residual levels of phosphate are only 0.35% to 0.5%.

The Food and Drug Administration has classified phosphates as "generally recognized as safe" if their residual levels in the meat do not go above 0.5%. The shrimp sometimes have more than this level of phosphate when they are harvested, Perry said.

The consumer benefits from using the STP-treated frozen seafood because the thawed product has more of the texture and nutritional value of fresh shrimp. Boiled 3-month-old shrimp that have been treated with phosphates are slightly more plump and tender than nontreated shrimp.

The seafood industry along the northern Gulf of Mexico has begun slowly to adopt such "new" technology as the use of phosphates as a pretreatment for frozen products and have encountered few problems.

Some processors still prefer the traditional methods of past years when the seafood industry was a "quaint cottage industry down by the sea."

But, today a seafood plant owner can improve his profit margins at the same time by using a safe "chemical" at his plant.

Perry believes that the industry as a whole will eventually utilize this technology, as the red meat industry did long ago.

Roberts briefs Hancock community leaders on telephone rate outlook

Don Roberts of Gulfport, South Central Bell district manager, Monday briefed community leaders in Hancock County on local telephone service rate increases over the next year, adding that charges for long distance will probably decrease.

Roberts, who made a slide presentation, was assisted by Don Prealey, public information officer for South Central Bell, and Norene Felder of Bay St. Louis, secretary, at the meeting held at the Wheel Inn Restaurant.

Roberts said charges for local telephone service will increase over the next year or so and that charges for long distance will probably decrease.

"Technological advances and competition in the industry fostered by Federal Regulators are causing changes in the prices for telephone service."

"On the other hand the consent decree signed by AT&T and the Department of Justice is bringing about structural changes," Roberts said.

He said that beginning in 1984 South Central Bell will provide local service and AT&T will be a completely separate company providing both premise equipment and long distance service and competing with a number of equipment vendors and long distance providers.

"Since customers are already connected through South Central Bell facilities, they will 'access' long distance through our lines. Customers will be able to choose which long distance company they want to use," Roberts explained.

In the past local telephone companies received a portion of long distance revenue from AT&T to help pay for the local facilities to provide long distance access.

Since these subsidies will end in 1984, the FCC ruled that customers would help pay part of the cost of providing access through a monthly charge and that the long distance companies would pay part of the cost.

Roberts explained that other factors are putting pressure on the rates for local service including the need to be competitive in the financial marketplace, the need for faster depreciation and the cumulative effects of inflation.

All together these factors could cause local monthly rates to as much as double.

The other side of the story is that long distance rates should come down.

"It looks like customers who use very little long distance will probably see the largest increases in their total bill, and heavy long distance users will see the smallest increases," Roberts explained.

"In a competitive environment, prices move toward costs, and those customers who use services the most pay

Havens responds to Bell projection of rate doubling next year

Lynn Havens, chairman of the Mississippi Public Service Commission has issued a statement concerning the announcement by South Central Bell that telephone rates could double by late filing in the end of the year.

Havens stated, "I find it almost amazing that South Central Bell would even entertain a rate filing of this nature when by its own admission they have stated that they are losing services under the divestiture case and certainly if this is occurring their expenses are reduced accordingly."

"This is almost a re-run of the $88 million case when South Central Bell claimed it was on the verge of bankruptcy and the same year showed $129,000,000 in profits in the State of Mississippi."

"I witness every day South Central Bell continuing to discontinue service to consumers, which the consumers have virtually become a computer number and no longer can achieve any personal attention in obtaining service and what I mean by this is when a person's telephone goes out of service on the Gulf Coast, they have to call Jackson, Mississippi to report the telephone out of service."

"They are discontinuing employees and discontinuing services and at the same time are foolish enough to request a rate increase while at the same time decreasing services."

Havens stated the divestiture case, which brings about a lot of deregulation, would have an impact on telephone rates.

"In July of 1981 before the Petal, Mississippi Rotary Club, I made the statement warning that this could easily happen. It is absolutely a crying shame that Congress did not have a Communications Act to consider and left the entire divestiture proceedings up to the United States Justice Department."

"It is my belief that those charged with the responsibility of representing the people on a national level are going to realize that they have allowed AT&T and Bell to absolutely get away with a tragic move as far as the American people are concerned in communication."

"This is another clear cut case of the Federal Government trying to fix something that is not broken."

"I can assure the telephone consumers of this State that we will absolutely stand firm on any increases in rates without total justification of improved service or increased expenses in which Bell failed to prove in 1982."

"I call on South Central Bell at this time to do the same thing that the electric companies have done and that is to discontinue to collect any of the proposed rates of the $88 million increase and to discontinue to increase rates under bond."

Real Estate Commission sets timeshare hearing

The Mississippi Real Estate Commission will conduct a public hearing Friday, June 24 at 1 p.m. at the Harrison County Courthouse in Gulfport to gather information on the need to adopt rules and regulations governing the sale of timeshare properties of Mississippi residents.

Timesharing of real estate is a relatively new concept in Mississippi and is growing rapidly, especially in resort areas, according to John L. Kennedy, commission chairman.

Kennedy said the Legislature recognizes the need for specific regulations of timeshare sales and amended the real estate license law to authorize the Real Estate Commission to adopt specific rules and regulations.

Kennedy stated that the commission wants to hear from members of the public,

ETV Brief

ROSENBERGS

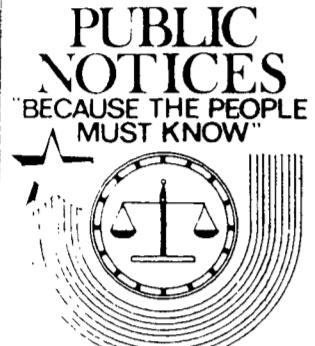

"The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg," first telecast on public television in 1974 and updated in 1978, has again been updated and will be rebroadcast at 10 p.m., Monday, June 20, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

Julius Rosenberg, a machine shop owner on New York's lower East Side, and his wife Ethel, housewife and mother, were found guilty of passing atomic secrets to the Soviet Union in 1951.

They were the first and only Americans to be put to death under civil law for espionage.

They were also the first married couple ever executed in the United States.

Their execution, on June 19, 1953, after 23 appeals and several pleas for presidential clemency, was accompanied by protest marches both here and abroad.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1983-1C

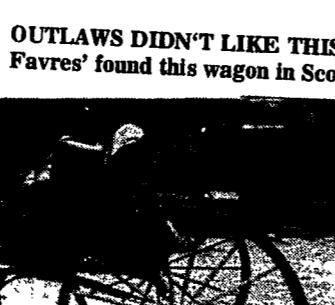

TOY ANTIQUE WAGON—This little wagon was probably used by the children of the first pioneers going west. Favre said he has seen a couple of others similar to it but, they were in museums.

WAITIN' TO BE HITCHED—Favre says, "We hook the wagons up all the time and take rides along the trails. Everytime kids stop by we try to take them out."

BULL SAW BETTER DAYS—This bull skull hanging on one of the outside walls of Favre's barn adds to the western flavor of Favre's property. With the wagons standing around, the horses and mules waiting to be hitched up, and with the appearance even of Favre himself, one could imagine himself in the middle of the old west.

OUTLAWS DIDN'T LIKE THIS WAGON—This jail wagon is one of Favre's favorites. The Favres found this wagon in Scotts Hill, Tenn.

PRETTY FANCY RIDING—Marty Blackstock who works for Favre drives this wagon built in the 1880s and made in Germany. The name tag on the back reads, 'Miesmer and Oetjen.'

GENTLE AS A KITTEN was the way Favre described his mule. "Kids can pull on his back legs and he won't do a thing," He likes people said Favre.

Practical uses found for antique wagons

By JUNE M. HEYDT
Stagecoaches, covered wagons, two seated carriages, a jail wagon and the animals to pull them are all part of a collection here in Bay St. Louis.

No, they're not at a museum or in an antique shop, and they're not part of a history course either. The pieces are part of a collection of horse drawn vehicles owned by Hugo Favre.

Favre said he started collecting the wagons over 25-years ago. He picked up his stagecoach in Camden, Tenn. "It was in bad shape when I got it but, we rebuilt it," said Favre. The trip took five and a half months.

He owns a two seated carriage that was built in the late 1800s. On the back of the two-seater is a nameplate which reads, 'Miesmer and Oetjen.'

Another two-seater of his has written on it, 'U.S. Model 1909. The Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Ind.'

One of Favre's favorites is an ambulance wagon that he found in Algiers, La. It had been stored for 52 years. Another favorite, his jail wagon, came from Scotts Hill, Tenn.

Favre says he uses all his wagons and is constantly hitching them up and taking them out on the trails.

"Lots of people ask me how much the wagons are worth," he says, "I tell them they're not for sale, so I really don't know what they're worth."

Favre relates a story of when a man wanted to buy his black two-seater buggy and his black horse, "He kept coming back and asking me to give him a price, the last time he said just tell me how much you want and I'll give you it. I finally had to tell him, they're just not for sale."

Favre and his wife Myrna drove to Valley Forge, Pa. in 1976 in one of their covered wagons. "It was our way of celebrating the bicentennial," said Favre. The trip took five and a half months.

"School children come out to see the wagons all the time," he said. "About five years ago some teachers who had heard about the wagons asked if they could bring the kids over on a field trip. Sure, I said. Ever since then people call all the time wanting to come out on a tour. Mostly though its school kids."

In his collection he has pony carts, sleighs, and a racing cart that he says can really race.

Sometimes people ask to use the wagons in parades or weddings. Next week the Surry wagon is being lent out for a wedding in Kiln.

The Pepsi wagon was on display at Keesler Air Force Base recently and the Jail wagon was in a parade a couple of weeks ago.

Favre says that eventually he wants to open a wheel shop. "I love to demonstrate to the kids, and I think it's very important that they learn what it was like back when the country was young."

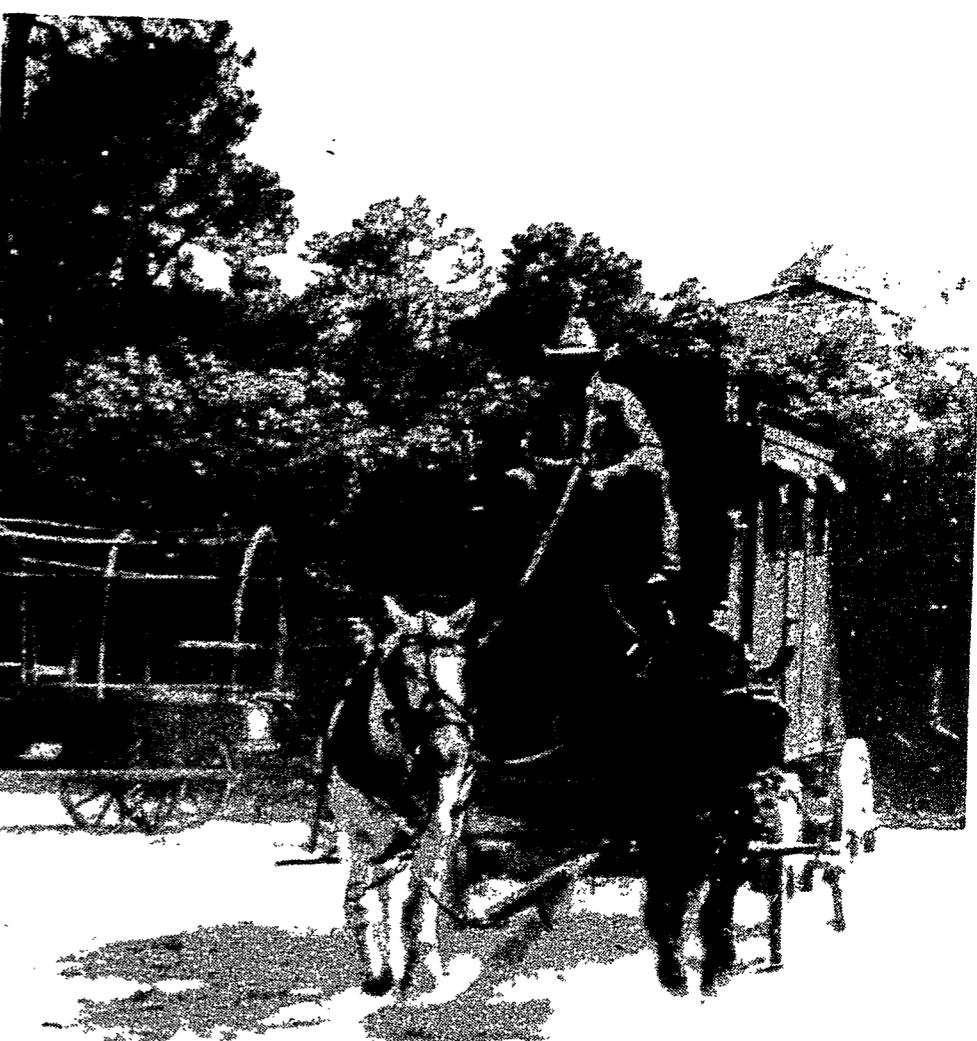

"Eventually I plan to also open a blacksmith shop, and then finally I'm going to set up a whiskey still, now I'm not going to use it, it's just going to be for demonstration purposes only," Favre said. "I believe very strongly in bringing history into the lives of the young."

Favre and his wife like to travel around to the different flea markets and antique shows throughout the country. Favre says he gets most of his stuff by trading at these places.

On the ceiling of his home he has hung his spur collection. And in his sheds is his collection of saddles and other types of tackle.

When asked if he makes a living with the wagons, Favre said, "I really don't have to make a living, because I don't owe any bills."

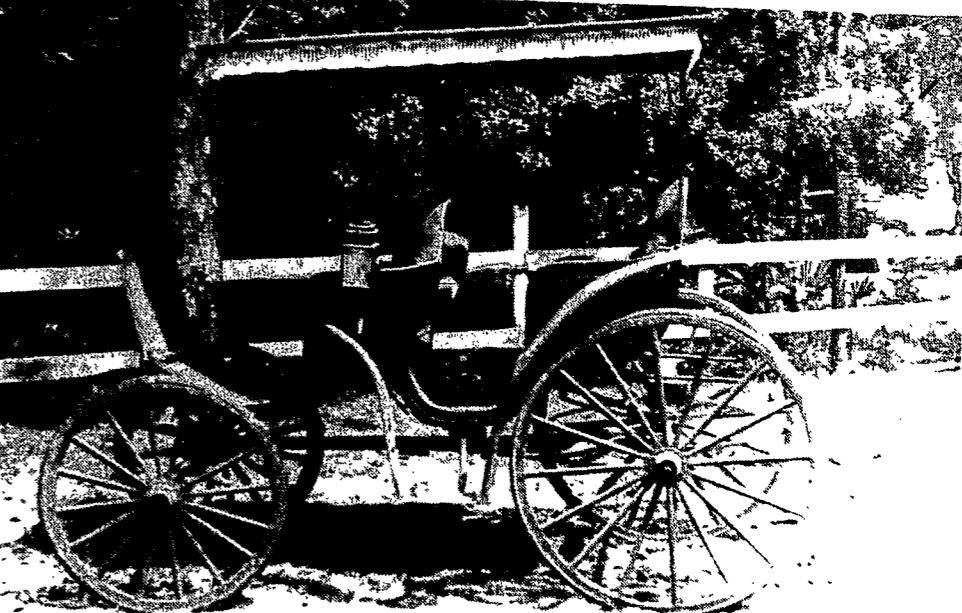

"I just enjoy collecting."

FAVREVILLE EXPRESS—The Favres' own several covered wagons but are most proud of the Favreille express. In 1976 the couple drove to Valley Forge, Pa. in a covered wagon. The trip was their way of celebrating the bicentennial.

SMALL COVERED WAGON—It's hard to believe that these wagons travelled across country carrying families and all their possessions.

SURRY WITH THE FRINGE ON TOP—Favre said this wagon is quite frequently used in shows and sometimes used in weddings.

Go Ahead, Ask Your Doctor

When you go to your doctor for a prescription, you start to wonder what he's doing. You wonder what he means when he says "no immediate treatment is necessary." Do you know what those guidelines mean? Do you know the side effects and how to treat them? Do you know how to read a prescription? Do you know what to do if you feel sick? Do you know what to do if you feel well?

What side effects can drugs cause?

PARTY TIME—Commencement speakers at this time of year are accustomed to outlining a litany of profound meanings associated with high school graduation, but one thing graduation always means in the Bay St. Louis area is "It's Party Time." Hosting one of the traditional stops on the graduation party tour is Ms. Mildred Figaire of 532 Main St., a member of the Bay Senior High staff. (Echo staff photo by Edgar Perez)

ABOUT BLOOD PRESSURE

High blood pressure is one of the most common afflictions of today. Some of the symptoms are dizziness, headaches, shortness of breath. Of course, high blood pressure has accompanying diseases and is often associated with metabolic disturbances and tension. It is estimated that 75 million Americans suffer from high blood pressure. The arteries and veins of the body have the power of dilation and contraction. This ability is produced by the action of nerves supplying the muscles of the blood vessels. Interference with the function of these nerves caused prolonged contraction or narrowing of these blood vessels, giving rise to high blood pressure. A team of surgeons not long ago developed a new procedure for cutting the offending disturbed nerve groups. However, more recently, the Chiropractic profession has developed a simpler process. That is, adjusting and removing the nerve interference from the disturbed nerve groups, thereby removing the cause, and allowing the blood vessels to function properly again resulting in normal blood pressure.

Answer To Puzzle:

CROSSWORD

The answer to this week's puzzle contains four seven-letter words that closely resemble each other. This is because they all claim the same Latin root—the Latin verb meaning to call or cry out. Although the words aren't commonly used together, we're sure you'll see the connection.

The Sea Coast Echo Book Review

"Bible Belt," a term first introduced to ridicule the South, has now come to signify the most distinctive feature of Southern culture — a steadfast devotion to evangelical Protestantism. Outside pressures today threaten but have not yet dampened its zeal.

"Of all Southern institutions, religion has been the most independent and distinctive," said Dr. Charles Wilson, assistant professor of history at The University of Mississippi.

"The South is the only region that has its own identifiable religion — evangelical Protestantism. Much more than the politically solid South that we have heard about, we have had a religiously solid South. It predates and is outliving the political idea."

When famed liberal editor H. L. Mencken was lambasting the South in the 1920s, he coined the "Bible Belt" phrase to ridicule what he conceived to be ignorant and backward religion, Dr. Wilson recalled, but the term is more useful now to express the pervasive influence of religion on Southern culture.

It is true that the South in Mencken's time did suffer from isolation and provincialism and a lack of exposure to the Catholic and Jewish faiths that were being introduced in the north and midwest by hordes of immigrants, Dr. Wilson acknowledges.

"They preached that although the South had lost the political and military struggle, we had to fight even harder to maintain our religious independence, a cultural separateness with religion at the heart of the experience. It almost became a social obligation to join one of the churches."

As churches in other areas changed, Southern churches stayed much the same, with the evangelical fervor expressed in the emphasis on conversion and a direct encounter between God and man.

"Ministers in that day continually referred to the Civil War as a holy war, with the South on the side of the Angels," said Dr. Wilson.

"They preached that although the South had lost the political and military struggle, we had to fight even harder to maintain our religious independence, a cultural separateness with religion at the heart of the experience. It almost became a social obligation to join one of the churches."

As churches in other areas changed, Southern churches stayed much the same, with the evangelical fervor expressed in the emphasis on the South, he noted, with outside competition ranging from the family automobile to the media and video games eroding the influence of the church. Churches also have less substantial ties with schools than in earlier times.

"It is the totality of its influence that makes the Southern church distinctive," said Dr. Wilson.

"It has penetrated all of Southern culture through its imagery, from art and music and literature to politics, providing a context to guide creativity. When you talk to Southerners, it's important to know that they think in biblical imagery."

The fact that the South gave birth to gospel music is part of this sweeping influence, Dr. Wilson believes, as well as the domination of religious programming on radio and television by Southern ministers.

But times are changing in political rallies rarely take on the righteous tones of yesteryear, there is still plenty of unbridled religious zeal at revivals, tent meetings and all-day singings.

And the distinctiveness of Dixie remains. "A lot of it has to do with cultural style," said Dr. Wilson. "We are still heavily influenced by religious terminology imagery and models. Certainly to a lesser degree today, but religion is still our most distinctive Southern institution."

"Someone once asked William Faulkner why his work had so much religious imagery," he added "and he said, 'Well, that's what I have to work with. There's a lot of it here.'"
